Title Instructions: Frequently Asked Questions

Q: Does the same person who signed as owner on the front of the title have to be the person who signs as seller on the back of the title?

A: No, whoever is the current authorized signer for your business can sign the back of the title, whether it is the same person or not.

Q: Does the same person who signed the back of the titles sign the 130U form?

A: Yes, Texas DMV requires that both signatures match.

Q: What if I bought the vehicle from another party, but never had it transferred into my name?

A: Lemons Auctioneers, LLC will not be able to include any titled property in an auction, unless there is a clear title and it is in your name. Nothing can be written on the back of the title, other than your name and signature, as the seller.

Q: What if there is an active lien on the title?

A: Lemons Auctioneers, LLC will not be able to sell any titled property unless the lien has been released. If the lien is released and the lien holder did not sign and date the "lien released" section on the front of the title, we must have an original release of lien letter from the lien holder, before we can include the property in an auction.

Q: What happens if I write the date in the "date of sale" box on the back of the title?

A: An affidavit (i.e. Statement of Facts) will have to be composed on your letterhead, with all of the vehicle information, stating that you mistakenly wrote the incorrect date in the "date of sale" box. However, this can't be done until the vehicle is paid for and removed from your property, since we must also state what the correct date should have been. This affidavit has to be signed by the same person who signed the back of the title. One line should be drawn through the incorrect date on the title, then the correct date can be written directly above the incorrect one. The original affidavit is then given to the buyer, along with the title and the business card of the signer.

Q: What happens if I make an error while printing or signing my name on the back of the title?

A: An affidavit (i.e. Statement of Facts) will have to be composed on your letterhead, with all of the vehicle information, stating that you mistakenly wrote/signed the incorrect name on the "Printed Name" or "Signature of Seller" line. Then state what the correct name should have been. This affidavit has to be signed by the same person who signed the back of the title. One line should be drawn through the incorrect name/signature on the title, then the correct name/signature can be written directly above the incorrect one. The original affidavit is then given to the buyer, along with the title and the business card of the signer.

Q: What happens if I accidentally print or sign my name on the wrong line(s) on the back of the title?

A: An affidavit (i.e. Statement of Facts) will have to be composed on your letterhead, with all of the vehicle information, stating that you mistakenly printed/signed your name on the wrong line. Then state what line you meant to print/sign your name on. This affidavit has to be signed by the same person who signed the back of the title. One line should to be drawn through the incorrect name/signature on the title, then the correct name/signature can be written directly above the incorrect one. The original affidavit is then given to the buyer, along with the title and the business card of the signer.
