Residential real estate consumers, both purchasers and sellers, may benefit from a mechanism maximizing their ability to obtain information concerning a home purchase and sale. This uniform disclosure statement may aid both purchasers and sellers to identify aspects of properties which may require attention: health, safety, environmental, structural, mechanical or other potential problem areas.

This disclosure form is not intended to diminish the responsibility of buyers to carefully examine the property which they intend to purchase, and, in fact, highlights the importance of professional inspections and environmental tests. This disclosure form does not limit existing responsibilities by a seller, buyer or licensee concerning the condition of the property or potential liabilities or remedies at law, statute or in equity.

This disclosure may significantly improve the transfer process and better serve the interest of all parties to a property purchase. It may increase clarity regarding the nature of the property and provide greater certainty to contracts entered into by better-informed buyers and sellers.

Under current law, the SELLER is required to disclose all known conditions that affect the health or safety of a prospective purchaser. SELLER discloses to PURCHASER that SELLER knows of no defects in the subject property, other than those deficiencies disclosed in this form.

Accordingly, SELLER(s) hereby authorize(s) licensee/broker to provide a copy of this Disclosure to any person(s) or entity(ies) in connection with any actual or anticipated sale of the property.
